THE LATE PASTORAL AND THE EDUCATION QUESTION.

Yesterday evening the Rev. Dr. McElbown addressed a large congregation in his church, in Palmer-street, on the subject of the recent pastorals of the Roman Catholic Bishops. After reading as his text the 6th verse of the 4th chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, he said: "I have glorified you, Father, in the presence of the multitude, inasmuch as the things which you have commanded I have done: and men have not despised me, neither have I despised them: for I have kept your commandments." "A charge had been made in the highest quarter against the teaching in our Public schools which ought to excite the attention of every citizen. The charge had been made, it was said, that the teaching of the schools was unbecomingly un-British, that it was a slur upon the British nation. It was true, it was a horrible charge to bring against the Parliament and the Churches and the people of the country; but if it was true, it was a charge which ought to show his indignation that his character, his patriotism, his intelligence, and his religion had been so greatly outraged. The fact was, that the annual sum of £1,000,000 which was expended in public money annually on a system of education which had its ramifications should be proved, every one ought to interfere to stop them. The teachers of the schools should be asked to send among them should be roused to a full and crushing reply. In examining the charge he proposed to look at the schools which the Bishops would substitute for those which the Jesuits would suppress. He would also look at the teaching of those with that of the schools which they already had. They would see what Dr. Vaughan had said in his second Pastoral about flooding the country with the teaching of the Jesuits. He would see if the Jesuits were to give the children all the education which they ought to get. But the teaching of these people had been of such a character that the heads of the schools would be obliged to refer to them to tell them that the fruits were so manifest, and the miseries it produced were so abundant, that the sooner they closed the schools, took away the Jesuits, and sent the children home, the safer it would be for the peace of the country, and the better it would be both for the religion, and the morality of the young and the old among the people. In the countries of Europe, he said that having advanced the Pope to the throne of the deity, they now demanded that the world should have its neck under his feet. And the world would be introduced into this country. The Jesuits were to be the teachers of true religion to the children of the land.

[illegible][illegible][illegible][illegible][illegible]

Now attending public schools should be at once removed from them, and sent to Roman Catholic schools as there only they have their chance of becoming good citizens, and being saved from damnation. Fourthly,—That the Church speaks with the highest authority to parents, and defaulters must be punished by withholding from them the ordinances of the Church. Remarkable inconsistency was displayed in the treatment of Kenna by the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL

£58,099,801, and the ordinary expenditure, leaving out nearly five millions on productive public works, was £52,512,888. For the current year the estimate is £54,562,000, and the expenditure £56,917,000, besides three and a half millions expended on productive public works. Thus there is a deficit of three and a half millions for the former and one and a half millions for the latter year. As the Indian subjects of VICTORIA are estimated, even after the ravages of four terrible famines, at a hundred and ninety million souls, at a hundred expenditure of sixty-six millions sterling may seem light to those who judge from English and Australian standards. It is only at the rate of 7s. per head as against an expenditure in New South Wales equal to £7 12s. 9d. per head for the year ending last June, and about £2 7s. per head in the United Kingdom. But how widely different are the resources and social condition of the people. Here, wages are from 7s. to 12s. per day, and in India they average less than 4d. per day. Multiply the rate of expenditure imposed on the people of India by the difference in the rate of wages, and the people of New South Wales would have to bear an annual expenditure nearly three times as great as they now bear to be in the same relative position as their fellow-subjects of Hindostan. To impose further burdens upon a people so utterly impoverished would be to re-enact the part of the PHAROAH who demanded bricks from their Hebrew slaves without supplying

The last named item amounted to £2,000,000, and England proposes to lend that sum to India for the present, without interest, to be repaid in seven annual instalments. That is the very least she could do, considering how popular the Afghan war was in England and that in Hindustan the people, who have to pay the taxes, have no means of making their voice heard. The war may have the effect, and probably will, of making our Empire more secure, and so of benefitting the native tribes. It is also fair that those who are benefited by an expedition, should contribute to it in proportion. The total cost of the Afghan war is estimated to be at least £2,600,000, and by the present proposal, England will pay only the interest on the loan, which will amount to £1,000,000.

on the two million loan, which will amount to about £320,000, leaving all the rest to be repaid by India. This is an exceedingly unfair proportion for a war which Lord BRACONNORFIELD said "concerned the character and the influence of England in Europe." But it is a maxim in political economy that taxes should be distributed with some regard to the resources of the taxpayer, and in India the extreme limit has already been reached. The estimate for the army for the ensuing year is £18,255,000, and the loss by exchange, consequent upon the depreciation of silver, is estimated at the enormous sum of Rs. 2,321,000. These are the two items which have caused the deficit, and have swallowed up half the amount that ought to have been set aside for productive works, and the whole estimated famine insurance surplus. The saddest fact in the whole financial statement is the dissipation of that surplus, and the authorities at Calcutta seem fully aware of this, for they say :—“The Government of India has repeatedly declared that an annual surplus of Rs. 2,00,000 is necessary in ordinary times to provide the means of protection ing, so far as may be possible, the country against famine, and leave a margin such as every solvent State ought to maintain to meet unforeseen contingencies. It has been necessary to abandon all hope of obtaining such a surplus in the coming year." Should another famine occur within a short time it will find the Indian Government as ill-prepared to grapple with it as ever; and even the expenditure on productive works such as might tend to prevent seasons of scarcity is to be only half what was intended. In the Max-number of the Nineteenth Century, Mr.

FAWCETT tells us that "during the last twelve years there have been four famines in India, and since 1873 the famine in Bengal and the recent famine in Southern India have entailed an expenditure of £10,000,000." Taking a still wider range of observation, SIR JOHN STRACHEY estimated that the least provision for future famines that could be regarded as reasonably safe was an annual surplus of £1,500,000. Accordingly new taxes were imposed for that purpose, and the salt duty, which reaches all classes of the people, was increased 50 per cent in Madras and increased by 40 per cent. Bombay, and the Viceroy expressly declared on behalf of the Government—"We have pledged ourselves not to spend one rupee of the special resources thus created upon the works of a different character." What will the people of India think of British good faith when they learn that every rupee of these special resources has been spent for other purposes, and there is besides another deficit of nearly a million and a half sterling.

The public debt of India, which already amounts to about 220,000,000, is to be further increased by a  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. loan of three and a half millions to be raised in India, and ten millions to be raised in England, besides the two millions to be lent by England without interest, on account of the Afghan war. The effect of this will be to increase the amount of interest to be annually sent to England, and therefore still further to increase the loss by exchange. As Germany has recently demonstrated silver to the extent of between fifteen and twenty millions sterling, the depreciation of the silver currency is likely to continue for some time. The only way to extricate India from a condition bordering on bankruptcy is to reduce the cost of government by exercising the most rigorous economy in every department, and so to improve the efficiency of labour and the facilities for production and commerce as to enable her people to pay for their imports by an equal value of exports out of the immense resources, as yet undeveloped, but which nature has stored up for them in their boundless forests, gigantic mountains, and vast adjacent plains. To have as to every nation, good government in a

WEATHER, MAR

16 AUG, 1979 - 9 A.M. WITH NOTES TO B.B.

[illegible]

A very important judgment, as affecting the law of bigamy in the colony, was delivered in the Supreme Court yesterday (says the Brisbane Courier of August 6). At the last criminal sittings of the District Court, it was held that a man who had been married in England, and who had a charge of bigamy in the colony, was not guilty of the offence, if the first marriage entered into by Barton was celebrated after 8 o'clock in the evening, and his counsel raised the objection, that, inasmuch as the 11th section of the Marriage Act of 1862, which is the law of the colony, required the minister or registrar shall be deemed to be legal or not unless celebrated between the hours of 8 o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock in the evening, such marriage would be void, and the defendant would be guilty of bigamy. This point his Honor Mr. Judge Paul decided in favour of the consideration of the Full Court. This tribunal, giving its decision yesterday, required at length the parties to the marriage to be produced, and the other statements bearing upon the subject, and asked the court to consider the part of the 11th section relied upon, would, if given, meaning which it undoubtedly bears upon the face of it, that the portions of the marriage law, as it stands, against the rule of legal cohabitation, and the first marriage, was, therefore, held to be legal. So far the sentence passed

It was his duty to argue, was wrong. But there arose another question, which had not been previously referred to, viz. whether the jurisdiction appeared on the case, as stated for the opinion of the Appellate Court, that Harrison's second marriage, with the woman who bore him the child, was a valid one in England. Prior to the year 1805 an act was enacted by George IV., (chap. 31) was in force in this colony, which gave authority to the courts of our own and other colonies to determine the validity of marriages contracted where the second marriage had taken place in any of his Majesty's dominions. In that year, however, our Legislature passed an act, which gave authority to the courts of this colony, repeated the words of the Imperial statute as to the first, and inserted an Act called the Offences Against the Person Act, 1801, which gave authority to the courts of this colony to determine the validity of marriages contracted in cases where the second marriage shall have taken place "in Queen's land or elsewhere." Now, the Court, yesterday, pointing out the difference between the Imperial and the Colonial statute, held that the limited jurisdiction can speak only within the limits of its own territory, and held that the words "in Queen's land or elsewhere," referred to the territory of the Queenland or its dependencies. Consequently, the Court has no jurisdiction to deal with a case such as this, which is a case of a marriage contracted in England. As remarked by Mr. Harcourt, the strong result appears to be that Queenland is the only place in her Majesty's dominions where a marriage is valid, in a colony where the Imperial statute has been extended, it being necessary to limit the jurisdiction to the territory of the Queenland or its dependencies.

he would, has shown greater wisdom than our Parliamentarians would be able to exhibit, but here he may remain untroubled. The state of our law, as disclosed by this judgment, is not by any means satisfactory; and if the sanction of the marriage tie, upon which the British nation prides itself, is to be maintained in Queensland, some steps must be taken to alter the existing state of things.

A Dundee earthquake was felt in Glasgow. On the east coast the fog on Monday night, June 16, was so dense that navigation was stopped, while on the west coast the day was bright and clear. Heavy rain fell in the morning over the Glasgow district on Monday. Some damage was done at Dreanair by lightning. A distinct shock of earthquake was felt at Tolermory and other places in Mull. The shock passed from north to south-west.

LORD BROMHUGH AND THE RAILWAYS.—A volume which has just been issued, entitled "Selections from the Correspondence of the late Macvey Napier," contains the following letter from Lord Brougham, dated Knoyley, September 18, 1845:—"My dear Lord Napier: I have no doubt that I am altogether out of a tragedy. Poor Huskisson is either dead or must die before to-morrow. His people going off by a steam carriage. The folly of the passengers is to get into a horse-drawn carriage, exceeds all that they have paid a dear price."

Lord Janicula is a splendid bred animal, having for his sire

"As for the 5th Duke of Wetherby, we stated about a year since in the sketch, "A Noble Sire," that he is considered to have the most magnificent character of any Duchess Bled in the kingdom;
he is a wonderful stock-getter, and is said to stamp on all his sons and daughters, that high attribute of producing fine stock freely, and in great numbers. He is a great recreation man, and he never turns his hands in it without feeling his ribs. "Like a goodly lake," and it would indeed be disappointing if it did not and something very good from such a sire as 32nd Duke of Bedford, and grand sire 5th Duke of Wetherby."

Lord Januaria possesses the same male blood as the Duke of Bedford, lately imported by Mr. McCulloch to farm the domain of the Glenroy Lord, near Melbourne.
